The Case Against Grades (##)
"I consider that the best way to change a person is to attempt a smile in his face, and teach him to love his neighbor as himself."

-Cesare B. (1990) in "Beware of the standards, not just the tests"

I have long heard that there's something about all of us that makes us feel small and insignificant. I have also heard that the most important thing we can do is to make others feel important and loved. And I believe that is exactly what we should do.

-Capra, F. (1978) in "The nature of effort: Toward a paradigm for education"
